Apps, games and websites that leave something behind.

IN JAPANESE, 余韻 is the resonance that lingers after a sound has faded — the echo of a bell nobody is ringing any more. It's what I want from everything I make, whether it's an app, a game or a website: something that stays with you after you close it.

One person, every layer.

I'm Alberto Valverde, a software engineer (UDLA) with a master's in applied Artificial Intelligence, working from Quito, Ecuador. I make apps, games and websites alone, on purpose: I research the problem, design every screen, write the code, draw the icon, write the store listing and press submit.

By day I'm a Solutions & Operations Specialist at Mondo Tracking in Miami: fleet telematics and ELD support, IT operations, and the n8n automations that keep support scaling. By night, yoin labs.
